Mrs. Conklin Returns to Find Landmarks Gone and a New City.

Mrs. Conklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Nott, has just returned to ber of Honolulu on a visit to her parents and family, after an absence of thirty years. She finds wonderful changes in Honolulu, changes which have obliterated almost all of the landmarks familiar to her.

The government buildings, the Capitol and the Judiciary building, are the same now that they were then. Here and there, there is an old building that 'she can recall. Along Fort street there are a few, but only a few, buildings which were here when she left the

The district between Nuuanu avenue and the river has twice been largely burned over since she went to Brook-1900. Beyond the river, the whole of Palama is new. There were scattered residences there but they were not will sell them for numerous. The Kamehameha Schools were not then thought of.

In the other direction, the "plains" were then in reality the "plains." Beyond the Atherion residences near King and Alapai streets, there were but two or three houses until one reached "old Waikiki" which extended from where the Mochizuki club is now, as far as the Seaside Hotel. Beyond that there was nothing. Kapiolani was only nascent. Even to reach "old Waikiki" the stream had to be forded for there was no bridge, Bethel church stood at King and Bethel street. The old police station was beyond Nuuanu avenue between King and Queen streets. Fort Street church from which Mrs. Conklin was married, stood where the Japanese consulate does now. A part of Union street has undergone little change. There are a few of the old houses still on upper Nuuanu avenue. But the town has spread in every direction. Throughout its entire area new buildings have taken the place of old ones. It is an entirely new city. Very few of the landmarks have outlasted the thirty years of Mrs. Conklin's absence.

A good share of the credit for the success of the various contests among the automobilists on Thursday at Kapiolani Park is due the official timekeeper, Tom Hollinger, who held the watch in the various events and gave the greatest satisfaction to all who took part. Mr. Hollinger has timed innumerable horse races, but Thursday was his first experience with benzine buggies.
